PROPAGATING FISH.—The State of New York has set to work in good earnest to replenish the stock of fish in all the lakes and rivers within her borders. The task has been intrusted to a Commission composed of Horatio Seymour, George C. Cooper and Robert B. Roosevelt, and Seth Green, who is the General Superintendent. Four years since Mr. Green discovered the method of hatching shad. and tried his first experiments at artifical propagation in the Connecticut river. It seems that shad go out into the ocean, and by an unerring instinct return in three years to their native river. Last spring shad were so abundant that the price fell from eighteen dollars per hundred to three dollars per hundred. The accomplished pisciculturist very naturally attributed the glut in the fish market to his en-thusiastic labors three years before. Very prob-ably some of these shad found their way into the Hudson, as more were taken in that river than in previous years. The fishermen of the Hudson were at first somewhat incredulous. but they have been convinced of the merits of artificial propagation, and are willing to submit to the law which requires them to desist from hauling their seines on certain days during the spawning season, in order to permit the shad to reach the spawning beds, where the ripe melters and spawners are taken and the impregnated eggs placed in the hatching boxes. When the eggs have developed into young shad they are put into the river to follow the instincts with which nature has endowed them, and in three years they return to reward the fisherman for his painstaking labors.

Last year 8,295,000 small fry were turned loose in the Hudson. The Commissioners hope in the course of a few years 500,000,000 of young shad can be artificially hatched, when the yield will defy diminution by all the engines of destruction that the wit of man can devise. The Legislature is asked to enact a law probib iting the netting of shad from Saturday night to Sunday morning which would give the breeders a chance to reach the upper waters, where they can alone hatch their young.

THE MOSQUITO.-The Mosquito has arrived. His cheerful hum I heard on the quiet shores of Saten Island; he monopolizes the rural wastes of Brooklyn; he covers with his multitudinous wings the marshy levels of Long Islind, and he drops into the homes of this city, and with playful persistence makes himself one of the family. He is a gentleman of diversified tastes. The hovels of the poor are not bener:h his contempt, while he is not disconcerted on entering the mansions of the rich. He is a lover or places of public resort, and instead of paying an entrance fee, like other amusement seekers, he always presents a bill. In fact, he is fitted by nature for a playgoer, as he always makes a point of carrying a bill of the play with him. At concerts he takes part in the performance, and one is often startled at the Central Park Garden by hearing his melodious notes amid the exhilarating strains of one of Strauss' waltzes, or amid the tender harmonies of Lum-bye's "Visions in a Dream." Some people even speak of him as a vision in their dreams, and make odious allusions to the nightmare; but such persons are undoubtedly oversensitive. We like the mosquito. His note is not obtrusive, although he sometimes is. There is such energy about him, such persistence, such a go-ahead quality, that one at once knows that he is to be amused whether he is in the humor or not. And, then, there is such fidelity about the mosquito; no slights not even positive rudeness, can drive him way from those he likesand he is a universal lover. He remains your friend in spite of yourself. We suppose there will be "more of him" here before long. It is a cheerful prospect for company during the Summer, when the rich people and the office-holders are out of town indling their time away in "sea-side loiterings." In the meantime we welcome the mosquito who has come, and wait with patience for the arrival of his family. -Evening Post.

BALLOONING.—At Paris M. Dupuy de Lome has constructed an immense balloon weighing nearly two tons, with the intention of now or never solving the vexed question of arial navigation. The experiments made by M. de Lome with this balloon have attracted much attention, and are conceded to have developed some favorable results. The balloon itself is elongated, presenting an area of least resistance. To the car is attached a huge sail one hundred and sixty-one feet in total extent of surface, designed to act as a rudder. To enable it to so act, however, the balloon must gain sufficient headway not to drift with the wind, and to effect this, a screw propeller, with two blades each of thirty feet diameter, is employed. It has been found that by these means the balloon of M. de Lome can be worked at a considerable angle to the wind's direction. Further experiments are being made, but all these attempts so invariably end in failure that interest in them, through repeated disappointments, has become languid. If M. de Lome, by some wonderful good luck, should succeed, his success will be something more than a nine days wonder; and if he should fail, his name will be swallowed up among thousands of others who have met the same fate.

ATTENTION is being attracted to the use of the check rein on horses, and the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals have published, for general circulation, a compilation of opinions from the best authorities in Europe and America, showing that this piece of harness not only painfully restrains the animal by keeping his head in an unnatural position, but that it also seriously effects the circulation of his blood and engenders disease. Prof. Pritchard, of the Royal Veteripary College at London, says that "instead of preventing horses from falling, the check rein is calculated to render falling more frequent." He also mentions the physical injuries resulting from its use, such as distortion of the windpipe so as to impede respiration, excoriation of the mouth and paralysis of the facial muscles. He concludes that it is a useless appendage, supported only by fashion, and feels that if its effects were more generally understood, num bers of excellent persons who now drive their favorites with check reins would discontinue the custom.

Indeed, without these the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage, the prospect hourly darkens to the view, the mind becomes shadowed with despair, and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another is blighted with our own.

DISEASES OF IMPRUDENCE. When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds that he has imbibed the seeds of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame or dread of discovery deill-timed sense or sname or dread of discovery deters him from applying to those who, from education and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms of this horrid disease makes their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face and extremities, progressing with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a horrid object of commisseration till death puts a period to his dreadful suffering, by sending him to that undiscovered country "from whence no traveller returns."

It is a melancholy fact that thousands DIE victims to this terrible disease, through falling into the hands of ignorant or unskilful PRE-TENDERS, who, by the use of that deadly Poison, Mercury, &c., destroy the constitution, and incapable of curing, keep the unhappy sufferer month after month taking their noxious or injurious compounds, and instead of being restored to a renewal of Life, Vigor and Happiness in despair leaves him with ruined Health to sigh whence no traveller returns." in despair leaves him with ruined Health to sigh
